

1. “Land Development Regulations that Support Access Management,” Slide presentation contained on Access Management Interactive Library, Florida Department of Transportation, Systems Planning Office, October 1998.
2. Stover, Vergil G., and Koepke, Frank J., “Access, Location, and Design Participant Notebook,” National Highway Institute Course No. 15255, S/K Transportation Consultants, Inc., April 1998.
3. Access Management: Improving the Efficiency of Maine Arterials, A Handbook for Local Officials, Maine Tomorrow, Maine Department of Transportation, 1994.
4. Rainer, George, “Understanding Infrastructure, A Guide for Architects and Planners,” John Wiley and Sons, 1990, pp. 99–123.
5. Iowa City Comprehensive Plan, Trafficways Functional Classification and Design Guidelines, Table 5, p. 65.
6. “Highway Access Management Policy Study,” Minnesota Department of Transportation Report to the 1999 Minnesota Legislature, Minnesota Department of Transportation Office of Access Management, January 1999.
7. Simodynes, Timothy J., and Kuntemeyer, Marilyn, “The Effects of Reducing Conflict Points On Reducing Accident Rates,” paper presented at the 3d National Access Management Conference, October 1998.
8. Knapp, Keith K, Welch, Thomas M., and Witmer, John A., “Converting Four-Lane Undivided Roadways to a Three-Lane Cross Section: Factors to Consider.” Institute of Transportation 69th Annual ITE Meeting, Las Vegas, Nevada, August 1999.
9. Koepke, F. J., and Levinson, H.S., “Access Management Guidelines for Activity Centers,” National Cooperative Highway Research Program, Report 348, Transportation Research Board, National Research Council, 1992.
10. Williams, Kristine M. and Marshall, Margaret A., “Managing Corridor Development, A Municipal Handbook,” Center for Urban Transportation Research, University of South Florida, October 1996.
11. “Ten Ways to Manage Roadway Access in Your Community,” Center for Urban Transportation Research, University of South Florida, 1998.

Endnotes

12. Best Practices in Arterial Management, Corridor Management Group, New York State Department of Transportation, November 1996.
13. Snyder and Associates, Inc., Consulting Engineers and Planners, Ankeny, Iowa.
14. Planning and Community Development Department, City of Iowa City, Iowa.